You'll also be able to seek out former Accenture colleagues, using the Alumni Directory.

Its advanced search capability will help you reconnect with former contacts – even if you've forgotten their details.

Looking for Amy in HR? Or Steve in Marketing? Just enter the information you do have and let the system do the rest.

You can search by organization – and even set up alerts whenever someone new joins. It's also a great way to establish contacts at a potential target client.

Remember, in order to get the most from the network you'll need to maintain a current email address and an active profile.

You can do this using the LinkedIn profile import tool – it transfers all your details in seconds.

A complete profile means former colleagues will find it even easier to contact you – and Accenture can make sure you're receiving the most relevant information.

This could include updates from our business, invites to networking and recruiting events, thought leadership articles that are relevant to your area, and our alumni newsletter, Pathways.

If – like many Accenture Alumni – you've set up your own business, the Business Directory is designed to help you advertise your company or search for other alumni-owned companies.

And we're delighted to share exclusive discounts on insurance for business owners, as well as personal and family insurance.

You can find these benefits – together with great discounts from hundreds of merchants – at the Marketplace section of the alumni site

If you're looking to develop your career, you'll find job opportunities posted by fellow alumni, external recruiters, Accenture, and our clients.

Simply filter your job search based on your preferred criteria – and then save your search. This will register you for alerts to your inbox anytime a new position is posted that meets your criteria - and help you to be first to hear about new job opportunities.
