Bringing order to chaos and striving to create something that has not been done before has always been exciting and fulfilling to me. Even in middle school, I creatively used color pencils to present and simplify my complex pre-calculus homework problems.

Looking back, I've realized my childhood interest in creation has become a valuable asset in my daily work. Today, I'm extremely motivated by what I can create.

Working in the communications, media and technology industries, I'm free to think outside the box. I present complex ideas in simple ways to sell concepts and help create innovative solutions that often impact the world to move faster and better.

The culture at Accenture encourages me to tap into my youthful creativity to help improve people's lives with technologies. I resolve problems in creative ways, achieve new goals, and bring visions into realities. And this is really fun for me!

Creativity is my passion and, here, I thrive by using that passion to grow professionally and deliver value through my work.
