Whitney Langston

Video Transcript

My name's Whitney Langston. I'm from Texas and it's important to me because it's made me who I am today and it's where my whole family is. And I wanted to leave and travel to London and particularly work in London because I wanted to get international working experience, but I also wanted to grow personally and professionally. The opportunity to travel has given me a lot of cultural awareness and it's also reminded me a lot about what I love about Texas and where I've come from. I like to write newsletters to my family and friends back home because it allows me to share a little bit about my experiences and what I'm doing with the folks at home who are not getting to experience the same things through travel like I am. And it's a way to kind of stay connected to Texas and home even though I'm thousands of miles away. My Grandma, Sylvia(sp?), is from West Texas as well and even though, she hasn't had the opportunity to travel she keeps us all together. I think the great part about my newsletters is that they get so excited that I'm able to travel and have this experience, that it's great for them to read about my journey each week and get to share that with me. And I love sharing it with them.

Dear Grandpa, Dad, and Grandma, the wanderlust in all the people I meet here is unlike anything you will find in the States. I love chatting with my friends about where they've been and where they want to go because everyone is coming and going here. This journey is opening my eyes to so many cultures and so many different types of people. It's truly awe-inspiring. Wherever we go, home is always here.
