ENVIRONMENTAL ENGINEER

Tell us about yourself

My name is Anshika and I studied Masters of environmental engineering and I love Bollywood dancing.

What are you working on?

So currently I'm part of a sub security team in a Resources company. I don't think I have imagine myself as an environmental engineer working in a sub security team like there is no match. But I've been gaining the skills and just the client exposure you kind to get to know the clients expectation and work to work something.

What attracted you to Accenture?

Accenture gives me that flexibility where I can experiment with different roles, different projects and can decided what I like and don't like. And if there's an event where I need to Bollywood dancing, I can do the rehearsals at home and do the work as well, so at least I can have that work life balance, I can do what I'm passionate about and work at the same time. So ambition and passion goes together.

What's the culture like?

So the MD used to seat right across the table from me. And seeing a manager seating right next to me, so the exposure is great, they were looking for at the stuff I'm doing, where I was going wrong and they use to point out or where they thought that you know I need more help. Super supportive, super friendly, the people are really really nice and the opportunities are great, different volunteering events or in terms of work as well just different topics and experiences you get really helps you double up.
