MEET ALEX

I graduated from the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania. During my first year experience, I had an opportunity to meet with Accenture and received an offer for a summer internship.

It was a commitment to making sure that all the consultants had some core consulting skills under their belt and that was one of the reasons why I was interested in the company.

My job now is really working with my clients and really understanding the landscape that they're operating in and then making sure that you incorporate those learnings into your deliverables, so it resonates with the organization.

So, I enjoy bowling. What I try to do is just make sure that it's an engaging time for everyone.

There are a lot of parallels to being on a bowling league and being part of an Accenture Strategy team, it's working with different people, different backgrounds and different levels of skills.

Making sure you can work to the best of your ability to drive the highest performance you can.

What we do try to present to our clients are new ways to think about how to do work. We really looking into the space of digital workforce and how automation and digital offerings can present opportunities for clients to cut cost, do work better and optimize their models.

I'm Alex Destin and I'm a business strategy manager at Accenture.
