Authentic

Growing up as a daughter of immigrants, blending in was very important to me. Starting my professional career, I thought success meant emulating my leaders. Yet, at Accenture, I'm encouraged and pushed to be authentic and comfortable with my own style.

Over the years, I've had really great mentors and leaders who encouraged me be my true self, to stay genuine to who I am. So, I've embraced the very expressive me, which is admired. I've used my creativity to be innovative in structuring deals and solutions. This has helped me reach a level in my career where I manage a very large portfolio in Hi-tech and nurture a diverse team of people all over the world.

Today I pay it forward. Since I was encouraged to bring my authentic self to the table contributing towards a common goal, now I mentor others to do the same. This is the extra edge in how I add value to my clients, how I lead my teams, and how I thrive in my work.
