

EMPOWER

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

A key factor of my success at Accenture is the empowering leadership support I receive on a regular basis. The sponsors and mentors around me are my biggest cheerleaders. They coach and push me to do more, be more, and stretch my comfort level. They show me that I am ready to go after what I want, helping me to see more opportunities.

A few years ago as a first-year manager, my leadership team saw that I was capable of running our project operations. They trusted me to handle the responsibilities of a delivery lead, a role typically reserved for more seasoned managers, and I exceeded their expectations.

Another empowering moment for me was when I aligned to the business practice that focuses on cloud-based solutions for communications, media and technology companies. I wanted to be part of this practice, although I didn't have a ton of cloud experience at the time. My leadership team stood behind me and provided me the training to grow my skills in this area.

These are only two examples of how I am empowered to pursue new ideas, to conquer new challenges, to be successful, and to thrive. And now I aspire to create the same work environment for others.
