Businesses nowadays have become more dynamic that makes organization require more comprehensive consulting services. That the consulting firm they are looking for does not only being able to understand their pain points but also guide them through the whole transformation journey. Accenture is a perfect fit on that because we not only provide relevant insights but also strong at delivering solutions with quality and translate it into measurable result.

What inspire you in your working practice?

Accenture is transformational.

In a digital transformation project, we deep dived into the customer experience of our clients business to understand the customer's pain points all along the way. Then, we designed a new system to actually empower the customers to make their own choices at every touchpoint before and after their purchase. We truly transformed our client's business in a way that they could never imagine.

I worked in the change management team in a CRM implementation project. We had to manage 10 different departments and hold more than 30 classes of training. Despite the diversity of audience, we managed to deliver adequate support and training to all our stakeholders, tailored to each of their specific needs and requirements. It's all because of the hardwork and seamless coordination within our team, and the guidance and coaching from not only our senior teammates but also colleagues across different operations. As long as they have the relevant experiences, people in Accenture is always ready to help.

In this ever-changing business world with technology disruptions every day, which is also full of unknown challenges and needs for transformations, Accenture put a lot of weight in equipping our clients with cutting edge and relevant capabilities to disrupt the marketplace. We also have Accenture Ventures to develop our own source of disruption. This leading in the new high performance culture in Accenture which is always aiming at break-throughs really entices me.
