

MEG: HEARING BEYOND LIMITATIONS

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

I am Meg.

My family spotted my hearing disability when I was three years old. But because of my parents, I went to a regular school and grew up not feeling excluded as I engage with individuals like you.

I am a General Accounting Operations Analyst and have been with Accenture since 2012.

Here, I am able to apply complex analytical skills – handling, posting, reviewing and reconciling of client accounts in the consumer industry.

There is no such thing as a “lazy brain.” I love numbers and deep analysis. And because of this, my role and job is also my interest and hobby!

Working with a diverse group at Accenture is a matter of choice – taking chances and proving that there is more to being ME.

Becoming a Quality Auditor was a great opportunity for me. I use my sense of sight more and discover that I can really focus on my work amid the office noise.

Interaction with colleagues is never challenging. I don't only pay close attention to their body language, I am also skilled at lipreading.

Because of them and the supportive management at Accenture, I hear beyond limitations and explore my capabilities with self-confidence.
