My name is Vestrid, and I've worked at Accenture since 2014. I have created a blog called Change-In, and it's the association of two words, change and in, which means change from within so that you can truly be who you want to be. I believe that women have extraordinary abilities. But to discover our abilities, it is very important to know our strengths, our limits, our (inaudible). Every single day is an opportunity to learn about myself. I enjoy writing about my experiences and share them with others. I'm grateful for that. For me, a woman is just a person who can lead, who can have a job, who can have very important decisions.

At Accenture, I want to prove that changing from within is a good way to succeed. As a wife and mother, I'm very thankful to my husband and my son, who bring out the best in me every day. As a woman, I want to scream out loud to the world that every woman, no matter her skin color, her social status, her culture, has in her extraordinary strengths to make the world a better place to live. I am writing, "Every woman can lead", because I think as a woman who lived in Africa (inaudible) we have another vision of what women can do and not. My name is Vestrid, and I believe that every woman can lead.
