What kind of traveler are you?

Video Transcript

Uh, really, it is different depending on what I am doing, right? So depending upon whether it is short, quick business trip or if it is a conference or if it is a leisure trip and even within leisure, if it is a family trip or just me and my wife, I am a different traveler. In general, in business, I am a utility traveler. I just want the hotel to be at the right location. I want everything to work. It doesn't have to be fancy. It has to be a nice, clean room. Comfortable bed. Nice clean bathroom. Easy in and out. So, not really very demanding on that score except for the fundamentals. When I am traveling with my family, we generally are traveling to be educated so we've got a full plan, we want to try and squeeze as much in as we can in terms of sight-seeing and education and visits to museums and sights, etc. And there we want efficiency in terms of being able to get there easily. Want a nice property. Want the ability to have lots of nice meals together because part of travel in this case is the bonding of the family and part of it The education and the other part is just recreation. So that is sort of the spectrum. And in between there are all kinds of other. And most people think somebody is one kind of a traveler. I don't think any of us is really one kind of traveler. It really depends upon the occasion and the situation.
