

MEET THE MINDS. WALID ABDALLAH

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

Hi I'm Walid, I'm a technology degree apprentice.

I'm an analytical mind, and what that means to me essentially is someone who is logical, being able to look at facts as they are and draw connections from those.

I study digital and technology solutions, it's a three year course, I spend four days at the client site doing real work and solving real problems, and at the same time I spend one day at uni studying.

So I went to an event called Decoded, which essentially is an event that gives young people a taste of what it's like to be at Accenture. I met lots of people who were current apprentices for example, and managing directors, and I got to build my network months before I joined the company.

I find that everyone's really friendly, we have these break rooms where you can just get a coffee or eat your food or do some work and you can just start a conversation with pretty much anyone about what their work is and what they do and usually it's a good way to find a project.
