

EXPOSING HUMAN TRAFFICKING NETWORKS TO BRING PERPETRATORS TO JUSTICE

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

Human trafficking represents one of the most egregious crimes in the world today. There are somewhere between 20 million and 45 million victims currently enslaved around the world. The Global Emancipation Network links human trafficking data with law enforcement worldwide. Now, they can zero in on where traffickers put victims to work, with Artemis. Accenture's Applied Intelligence created the solution for combating human trafficking using data and analytics. We've created a platform which is a proactive, automated, risk classification engine which helps investigators prioritize their investigations. Artemis spotlights businesses and individuals most likely to be connected to human trafficking activity based on their public records and digital footprints giving law enforcement worldwide the leads they need to act faster and save more victims.
