The implication? Clicks aren’t going away. But bricks are back.

Consumers recognize the inherent benefits of both digital and physical shopping and are using both channels as they shop for the holidays.

Experience
Meeting expectations for seamless channel-less shopping

The good news? The overwhelming majority of retailers have taken action to minimize disruption.

After a year of shopping on-screens, younger generations, more than anyone, are looking to rediscover the social, physically interactive, and fun experiences provided by stores…”

But expectations for in-store holiday shopping have changed. Some traditional incentives are still important, but others are starting to lose relevance…

But the effects of the pandemic aren’t going away. Fast and free home deliveries are becoming the baseline expectation…

Brands, retailers and travel companies know all about the great digital acceleration triggered by the pandemic.

But expectations for in-store holiday shopping have changed. Some traditional incentives are still important, but others are starting to lose relevance…

Yet some things never change. Like the need to make shoppers feel special this holiday season…

But the effects of the pandemic aren’t going away. Fast and free home deliveries are becoming the baseline expectation…

Brands, retailers and travel companies know all about the great digital acceleration triggered by the pandemic. But now the desire for physical experience is coming back strongly, the need for seamless omnichannel services is greater than ever.

Will supply be able to match demand? Following well-publicized disruption, supply chains are in the news. And shoppers have noticed…

Experience
Meeting expectations for seamless channel-less shopping

The good news? The overwhelming majority of retailers have taken action to minimize disruption.

After a year of shopping on-screens, younger generations, more than anyone, are looking to rediscover the social, physically interactive, and fun experiences provided by stores…”

But expectations for in-store holiday shopping have changed. Some traditional incentives are still important, but others are starting to lose relevance…

Yet some things never change. Like the need to make shoppers feel special this holiday season…

But the effects of the pandemic aren’t going away. Fast and free home deliveries are becoming the baseline expectation…

Brands, retailers and travel companies know all about the great digital acceleration triggered by the pandemic. But now the desire for physical experience is coming back strongly, the need for seamless omnichannel services is greater than ever.

Will supply be able to match demand? Following well-publicized disruption, supply chains are in the news. And shoppers have noticed…

Experience
Meeting expectations for seamless channel-less shopping

The good news? The overwhelming majority of retailers have taken action to minimize disruption.

After a year of shopping on-screens, younger generations, more than anyone, are looking to rediscover the social, physically interactive, and fun experiences provided by stores…”

But expectations for in-store holiday shopping have changed. Some traditional incentives are still important, but others are starting to lose relevance…

Yet some things never change. Like the need to make shoppers feel special this holiday season…

But the effects of the pandemic aren’t going away. Fast and free home deliveries are becoming the baseline expectation…

Brands, retailers and travel companies know all about the great digital acceleration triggered by the pandemic. But now the desire for physical experience is coming back strongly, the need for seamless omnichannel services is greater than ever.

Will supply be able to match demand? Following well-publicized disruption, supply chains are in the news. And shoppers have noticed…

Experience
Meeting expectations for seamless channel-less shopping

The good news? The overwhelming majority of retailers have taken action to minimize disruption.

After a year of shopping on-screens, younger generations, more than anyone, are looking to rediscover the social, physically interactive, and fun experiences provided by stores…”

But expectations for in-store holiday shopping have changed. Some traditional incentives are still important, but others are starting to lose relevance…

Yet some things never change. Like the need to make shoppers feel special this holiday season…

But the effects of the pandemic aren’t going away. Fast and free home deliveries are becoming the baseline expectation…

Brands, retailers and travel companies know all about the great digital acceleration triggered by the pandemic. But now the desire for physical experience is coming back strongly, the need for seamless omnichannel services is greater than ever.