

High performance. Delivered.

My workplace offers daycare, so I can focus on work while my daughters thrive

Video Transcript:

Divya Gour, Team Lead, Accenture

Women do play a different role in life: they are mothers and they are professionals. Attaining a personal and professional life balance is not easy.

Mine is a nuclear family. I am the mother of two pretty girls. The elder one is Vanya and the younger one is Naisha. The elder one is four years old, and the younger one is two and a half years old.

Parents also aspire for professional growth. Attaining a personal and professional life balance is not easy. There are various childcare programs, offering day-long support for infants to school-age children. My organization has arrangements with many such daycare facilities.

This is the little world of my toddler at her daycare, and I am so amazed to see her dedication towards all her activities. Their daily progress keeps me motivated, to see that they are meeting their milestones. Definitely there is a family support with Accenture that helps you to be successful. I do have very understanding managers.

I can drop my kids, come to the office, work and then can go and pick up my kids. Then at times, when required, I can connect back from home. I do have complete focus in my work because everything is taken care of by the daycare. So for me, daycare is a great help.

Most of the parents are both working nowadays. However, companies supporting the childcare program are not very common. This program ensures the safe, progressive, and fun-filled environment for my kids. It gives me comfort that while I'm at work, my kids are in safe hands and taken good care of.