Accenture Healthcare Disrupted Collaboration Video Transcript

Collaboration is a fundamental building block of the new healthcare system. Fundamentally what we are saying is it's no longer OK for everybody to operate in their optimized little silos: a product company to be a product company, a provider to only be a care provider, a payer to only be an insurer. You basically need to operate in a collaborative environment to solve the bigger problem, which is really a socioeconomic problem of healthcare costs rising uncontrollably and of the aging populations just not being able to keep up with the total costs of healthcare. So we do need to come together; that broader collaboration within the ecosystem is fundamental.

So healthcare is actually one of the most complicated industries in the world. Because of that collaboration new forms of collaboration are actually going to be critical and so those organizations that actually define themselves as the better partner, those organizations that have some critical capabilities to drive to value will become the preferred collaborators in the future.
