

Meet Arielle

In college, I took some IT security classes and realized I had a real passion and interest for it.

At Accenture, I do web application scanning. Onboarding these web applications to the scanner and it tells us if there are any vulnerabilities.

One of Accenture's initiatives has been a research project called Cracking the Gender Code.

I was fortunate enough to partner with a lot of people, particularly with Girls Who Code, to figure out why it is that young women through junior high all the way through college are or are not interested in things like computer science.

And I feel obligated, and it's my duty, to pay it forward.

My name is Arielle Zwang and I am a cyber defense analyst at Accenture.

BE YOURSELF, MAKE A DIFFERENCE.
