VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

We are a talent development organization that increases the sustainable development of people organizations and society inspired by the strengths of street kids. In order to achieve this we organize activities in three different communities: street kids school kids and business communities.

With mobile school we focus on empowering street kids around the world. mobile schools are all terrain chalkboards on wheels that we bring to the streets. They slide open up to six meters long and you can attach educational materials on both sides of the school. we offer more than 300 games to empower and unlock the talents of street children.

The mobile schools are currently used by our partner organizations in more than 20 countries worldwide.

We also organize campaigns in primary and secondary schools to build changemakers skills within the coming generations. The business venture streetwise sells talent and leadership development programs to companies. We capture inspiration insights and skills found by mobile schools on the streets to design the trainings. All streetwise interventions are based on our Street skills model consisting of four competencies we found to be strongly developed by the out performers and winners in the street communities.

Positive focus agility and resilience proactive creativity and cooperative competition are the skills we use to support companies to become more streetwise. All profits of the business ventures streetwise are invested in the work of mobile school. This guarantees not only the sustainable growth of mobile school but also guarantees a constant flow of fresh inspiration input and insights for the streetwise clients.
