

COOLEST JOB EVER MEET EDGAR

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

Hello, my name is Edgar Vasquez and I'm a Technology Analyst at Accenture aligned with Accenture's technology architecture specialty.

I'm based out of the Chicago office and I'll be taking you through what a typical day can look like working at Accenture and just thinking about today, today's a remote day, walk a couple steps and here we are there's a workstation ready to go.

So one thing people find surprising when they meet me and find out a little bit more about me is that I'm a big heavy metal fan. If I could listen to any music for the rest of my life it would be heavy metal.

Other days are commute data and today I'll be taking the pink line downtown to the office. My typical day starts with the daily call where with my team where we give our updates on their projects. And the cool thing about that we get to work with people all over the world. So some of my team is here we have Lucas right here, we have Neha right there, but then some of my team is in Argentina and some of them are in the Philippines.

What are we working on Diego? Well today we're just working on a script to check our background processes.

What I like about working at Accenture for the past two years is that people here have a growth mindset, both for themselves and for the colleagues around them. People here will take the time to help you develop professionally and personally.
