

SC&O PEOPLE OF CHANGE VIDEO SERIES: CORINNE SCHLOESSER-RINKEL

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

Hi, my name is Corrine Schloesser-Rinkel. I live in Trier, Germany.

I joined Accenture in 2010. And I'm now Managing Director with responsibility for global Supply Chain transformation programs in the Chemicals Industry.

Before joining Accenture, I studied International Business Economics at the University of Maastricht in the Netherlands. I took part in an MBA program as well in Taiwan at the National Chengchi University Taipei.

And after all this international experience gained, I was sure I wanted to start my career at a truly international company.

Accenture is a global player that offers huge opportunities... but what really made the decision easy for me was the people I met during the recruiting process. I had the impression right from the beginning, that it I would be appreciated at Accenture.

I was part of a change and transition team that designed the future Supply Chain organization for the client, and we translated very complex changes into clear and digestible communication.

Now with digitalization, the Supply Chain is developing more and more.

Today, I'm known for my expertise in guiding clients through global large scale transformation programs in the chemicals area.

I believe in a diverse team with differing experience, beliefs, and also ways of looking at the situation.

We jointly come to a better solution as we think different directions and bring more to the table.

The best part of my job is creating value for our clients.
