If you've been contemplating returning to the workforce after a break of two years or more, but not sure where to start, you've come to the right place!

Accenture's Career Reboot program for women will help you re-build your career with the learning, training, and mentorship you need to succeed in reaching your professional goals.

The program offers you three different tracks to choose from a full-time, part-time or an internship role at Accenture that's mapped to your experience, skills and aspirations.

Let us talk a little about the tracks

If you're ready to harness your true potential and work for five days each week, then the Full-time track is the ideal way to restart your career with Accenture

If you can only spend some hours each day but are yearning for a fulfilling career, the Part-time track is designed to help you achieve just that. Master the industry's top skills as you re-enter the workforce in a nurturing environment created just for you.

If you are coming back after a longish break and are not sure of the direction you should take in your career? Apply for the Internship track that will offer practical knowledge and insights into roles that serve as steppingstones to the top of the corporate ladder.

Irrespective of which track you choose, you will have access to our award-winning learning boards, network of mentors and employees who will help you re-enter the workforce successfully.

We also understand that starting afresh can sometimes seem daunting. And that is why You'll be included into Accenture's Vaahini network which has been set up for women professionals to empower them and help them grow in their careers. You will have the opportunity to connect with the 120,000 members within the platform to grow your network and find your tribe as you level up in your career.
