Michelle: It is cool to be a woman in Technology! You get to be at the forefront of innovations, and build things that can truly improve the lives of our customers. It's very empowering.

Hi, my name is Michelle and I am a fitness enthusiast. I believe that in order to perform your best, you should stay active and maintain a healthy lifestyle. I also do encourage my team members to stay active as well.

I am currently part of the Digital Analytics Delivery practice in ASEAN.

My role focuses on data governance and visualization. I work closely with the clients to identify business needs, analyse their current business processes and help them harness the power of digital in their operations.

When and why did you join Accenture?

Michelle: I joined Accenture in 2016 after being in technology consulting for two years. I wanted to focus my career in Analytics, to help clients unleash the potential of data in their digital transformation journey.

In terms of my career growth, I am happy that my career counsellor takes time to discuss my priorities and areas for improvement. My career counselor is always there to listen and advises me accordingly.

My managers have also been supportive, giving me opportunities to take the lead and drive outcomes through various project roles.

Aside from that, I am also mentoring two young female members in my current project team. I give them advice about pursuing a career in technology.

Accenture provides equal opportunities for everyone. If you have the determination to grow your career, you will succeed.

Why did you choose a career in STEM?

Michelle: STEM is a very interesting field for me. I wanted to experience building enterprise solutions that impact our daily lives.

It amazes me how fast technology moves and grows. It can be viewed as something that is constant throughout anybody's life, and yet it is ever-changing.

Here in Accenture, I constantly feel empowered. I feel that I am heard and understood.

Because of that, the people I work with inspire me to be a better version of myself every day.
