YOGITA SENIOR SOFTWARE DEVELOPER

I joined Accenture in July 2015 as a Senior Developer. Coming from Mumbai to Newcastle was a totally different experience to me. The main difference that I would say would be working with people from different nationalities and working with people coming from different expertise. Because Accenture is more of a global firm where you get to meet people from all different kinds of areas, so it's a bigger exposure. I've been working in an Application Maintenance and Support project which is basically bug fixing. I've been doing it since the time I joined the project and I really like what I do. It's more like investigation stuff where you get to work in different tools and technologies at the same time.

Every day is a new challenge. I have lots of different activities besides going out doing normal shopping and going out with friends I have my own PlayStation, I play at home.

I like playing the story based games and I also like playing the racing games – it's more about the challenges you go through it's more about problem solving. It's very similar to what I do. The best thing about working at Accenture is to work with the great people you get to work with. I have worked with really good technical people, really good functionally-led people and beside that I have some really funny people too, so it's a really good mix.
