As you develop a vision and you work forward, you get it started, you get people who want to join you in that, people start to own it and you’ve got to give it up. People change, the vision should not.

Marc Cherna
It would be really good to continue to have a generative model, to really improve the community and the life of the people we serve.

Gina Lodge
These are the times when you can make the biggest changes. There are opportunities that are available because of the tough times.

JudyAnn Bigby
We need freedom, to do this in ways that allow us to know for our populations whether we’re getting there. Things change, and we need the flexibility to grow and innovate and change and grow and innovate and change. So, I want freedom.

Uma Ahluwalia
The biggest struggle sometimes is moving the middle, it’s not moving the leadership. I think we heard from everybody, the leadership often, and the ones who work with us, they get it.

Antonio Oftelie
One of the few professions in the world where as demand goes up for your services, the resources become constrained. Think about that. Private sector, that doesn’t happen. Most non-profit sectors it doesn’t really happen too often. For you guys, this is the toughest world to be in.

George Zegarac
We’re all facing exactly the same challenges and opportunities that exist. But I think we’re all focused on outcomes and we want to be more effective, regardless of how much money we have.

Wanda Rogers
We begin with outcomes and not process. We say, what is it that we want? Now, we know that process is important, but we talk about the outcome that we want first, and deploy our efforts to that.

This discussion around social impact bonds, and how it can provide an auxiliary finance method. Because we are being so innovative, and we continue to be in a very resource constrained environment, finding new ways to finance that innovation is important to us.

Marilyn Chase
We found that we began to make much more progress when we focused on what we all had in common. Ands what we had in common, and what we could easily agree to, is the fact that we all had an investment in strengthening families.

Ron Heifetz
It’s not just that it’s difficult, there are a lot of jobs that are difficult. It’s difficult in part because the stakes are so high. So many human beings at stake. Ands to move them along in their lives is a very difficult thing. Coming up with the systems to do that with, is a very challenging thing.

Tracy Wareing
That narrative, that new narrative is something we really need to focus on, and we need to talk about, be consistent about in how we help folks really understand what it means to invest in human services. And what that ultimately can mean for impact on communities.

Julie Booth
We really have an amazing opportunity to make a difference.
