Make a real difference with an Accenture Strategy career.
Turn your ideas into action
The future of business and the future of strategy are changing, as corporate leaders embrace new technologies to transform their businesses. With the boundaries constantly blurring, companies are asking themselves fundamental questions, such as: What business and industry are we actually in? What is our competitive edge, and how is our company anticipating and responding to the quickly changing business world?

Is Accenture Strategy the right place for you?
If these are the type of questions that get you excited - and if you’re looking to make a strong impact with your talent and ideas - then Accenture Strategy may be the place for you.

As one of Accenture’s five business areas, Accenture Strategy plays a crucial role in helping leading organizations shape and drive their plans for growth and innovation.

We are pioneers, constantly helping clients push the limits of what it means to be a high-performance business or government. Join our team to help top companies improve everything - from their approach to the market through day-to-day operations.

Use your talent to help clients
You want to use your passion and ideas to help companies transform their organizations and businesses in fundamental ways? To define the case for change? At Accenture Strategy, you will work to solve clients’ most pressing needs across multiple areas - at the intersection of business and technology.

You will partner with C-level executives to define "what" the business needs and then leverage the best of Accenture to implement the “how.” You will have a critical role in delivering real outcomes from initiatives that transform companies through technology.

Accenture is one of the world’s leading providers of management consulting, technology services and outsourcing. We’ve got more than 336,000 employees, and our offices are located in more than 120 countries. Our clients include 89 of the FORTUNE Global 100.

We are appreciated by our clients for our unparalleled experience, comprehensive capabilities across all industries and business functions - especially in the world of digital business - as well as our deep understanding of the world’s most successful companies. We are the ones who drive innovation forward and help set trends.

All of these capabilities - and our unique passion, energy and style – put us in a position to help clients truly become high-performance businesses.
Learn about Accenture Strategy

At Accenture Strategy, you’ll have the chance to address the wide range of challenges that companies face, including industry convergence, growth and innovation, global operating models, sustainable cost management, enterprise transformation, digital disruption and more.

You’ll leverage Accenture’s experience in designing and managing operations and business functions from the ground up, working together with colleagues in our industry-focused operating groups.

Together with professionals in Accenture Digital, Accenture Technology, Accenture Consulting and Accenture Operations, you’ll use your skills and expertise to help clients build capabilities across these areas.

Accenture Strategy works at the intersection of three key components:
Business Strategy
At Accenture Strategy, our work often starts with setting the stage for growth, innovation and competitiveness by developing with the client a practical, integrated business strategy in an industry context, with a strong focus on digital capabilities that are integrated across the enterprise.

You might work on projects that include designing a new business model, planning a post-merger integration or developing new digital products and digital revenue streams for companies in any number of industries.

You will:
• address strategy issues unique to an industry.
• develop strategies that address two or more different but converging industries.
• apply digital strategies to help clients transform their businesses.

Technology Strategy
The second area of Accenture Strategy is technology strategy. This area is focused on how to make the most of opportunities that come through digital disruption.

Creating a technology strategy is nothing less than drawing a technology-driven roadmap for transformation across the enterprise. Technology strategists identify and enable ways to build and synchronize the IT and operational capabilities required for companies to compete in the digital arena.

The fun doesn't stop there. After you leave the drawing board, you'll have the chance to bring various strategies to life by helping to build the actual IT and operational capabilities that companies need to execute them.

You'll help companies create information-led revenue streams, digital ecosystems, intelligent capabilities and value-driven governance to become true digital enterprises.

You will:
• help clients design their IT strategy and define the technology and infrastructure to support that strategy.
• enable new business initiatives and help companies reduce risk with IT security strategies.
• derive business value from technology innovations such as mobility functions, cloud computing and big data analytics.

Operation/Function Strategy
The third focus area of Accenture Strategy is operation/function strategy. This is where we help clients work faster and smarter with simplified and digitally-enabled internal functions. You’ll be coming up with innovative ways to pull together data and insights from operations, with the goal being to improve the flexibility and agility of the client's business and boost performance — whether operations are done inside or outside the enterprise.

You will:
• strengthen a client's finance and enterprise performance management.
• develop unique pricing and profitability strategies.
• help to reduce working capital.

By combining all three elements - business strategy, technology strategy and operation/function strategy - we make breakthrough outcomes possible. You'll help clients not just develop business strategies, but differentiate themselves through that strategy - to the point that they even disrupt the marketplace and redefine the terms of competition.
