Accenture Capability Network
Middle East

Amit Kumar: Managing Director – Capability Network Lead, Middle East.

Based out of Dubai, UAE

Working in Capability Network is different from working in local consulting practice is the fact that Capability Networks offers you a global career. Today, you’re working in UAE, tomorrow you’re working in Saudi, next day it could of been Qatar, in the GCC country, and after that, you know, for all you know, you could be working and doing projects in Europe, in U.S., in Australia, in India, who knows. That’s the uniqueness about working in Capability Network. The second thing which is unique about working in Capability Network is you could work across industry. So if today you’re working – doing a particular type of work in a particular industry, tomorrow you could move across industry. So we give that flexibility to our employees to work across industry, to work across function, depending on what their interest and career is.

Middle East as a region is growing through a huge transformation. It’s growing, the industry’s growing, the GDP of the region is growing. If you take UAE as an example, they have a big Expo coming up in 2020. If you talk of Saudi Arabia, his Royal Highness the King Salman announced in the Vision 2030, which is to de-risk Saudi Arabia economy from oil and therefore, there’s a lot of work happening in banking sector, in telecom sector, in health sector and that offers a huge opportunity for consulting as a business. We can, as Accenture, be present in the region and make a material impact to the economy of the region and to the people.

Accenture is committed to the region. We’ve established ourselves in the UAE, we’ve established ourselves in Saudi Arabia. And that itself is a differentiator. We want to be part of the growth journey that this region is going to go through. If you have passion to make an impact at your client, if you have passion to make a material change in your – in the economy and what’s happening in your part of the world, if you’re enthusiastic about traveling, if you’re enthusiastic about learning and working across industry, this is the right place to be.
