In a high-velocity business, the status quo is not good enough.

80% of executives agree HR should shift its mandate to become a driver of workforce performance.

What can HR do to have the greatest impact on the employee experience?

- Seize the moment
- Obsess about data
- Champion the employee experience
- Lead by example

What can HR do to have the greatest impact on the employee experience?

- Ensure its leadership understands how to apply digital technologies
- Create an operating model that adapts to employee needs in real time
- Hire more senior leaders from non-HR backgrounds
- Educate, coach and facilitate employees on talent practices
- Provide personalized employee services anytime, anywhere

To position HR at the center of the business, they:

- Seize the moment
- Obsess about data
- Champion the employee experience
- Lead by example

Powering the people agenda

Through data-driven insights, CHROs now have the opportunity to directly tie workforce-related decisions to tangible business outcomes.

Putting experience to work

High-velocity businesses require high-level traction and momentum to keep all workers engaged and committed to doing their best.

Renewing HR itself

In a high-velocity business, the status quo is not good enough.

80% of executives agree HR should shift its mandate to become a driver of workforce performance.

What can HR do to have the greatest impact on the employee experience?

- Seize the moment
- Obsess about data
- Champion the employee experience
- Lead by example

What can HR do to have the greatest impact on the employee experience?

- Ensure its leadership understands how to apply digital technologies
- Create an operating model that adapts to employee needs in real time
- Hire more senior leaders from non-HR backgrounds
- Educate, coach and facilitate employees on talent practices
- Provide personalized employee services anytime, anywhere

To position HR at the center of the business, they:

- Seize the moment
- Obsess about data
- Champion the employee experience
- Lead by example

Powering the people agenda

Through data-driven insights, CHROs now have the opportunity to directly tie workforce-related decisions to tangible business outcomes.

Putting experience to work

High-velocity businesses require high-level traction and momentum to keep all workers engaged and committed to doing their best.

Renewing HR itself

In a high-velocity business, the status quo is not good enough.

80% of executives agree HR should shift its mandate to become a driver of workforce performance.

What can HR do to have the greatest impact on the employee experience?

- Seize the moment
- Obsess about data
- Champion the employee experience
- Lead by example

What can HR do to have the greatest impact on the employee experience?

- Ensure its leadership understands how to apply digital technologies
- Create an operating model that adapts to employee needs in real time
- Hire more senior leaders from non-HR backgrounds
- Educate, coach and facilitate employees on talent practices
- Provide personalized employee services anytime, anywhere

To position HR at the center of the business, they:

- Seize the moment
- Obsess about data
- Champion the employee experience
- Lead by example

Powering the people agenda

Through data-driven insights, CHROs now have the opportunity to directly tie workforce-related decisions to tangible business outcomes.

Putting experience to work

High-velocity businesses require high-level traction and momentum to keep all workers engaged and committed to doing their best.

Renewing HR itself

In a high-velocity business, the status quo is not good enough.

80% of executives agree HR should shift its mandate to become a driver of workforce performance.