Shashank – Florida:
One of the reasons why students drop out, or transfer out of college is because they’re too excited to get into the work field. They want to go and start earning money. You know they're always looking for ways to start earning as soon as possible.

Casey – South Dakota:
You don’t have someone on top of you anymore. You don’t have someone who is constantly telling you when things are due, and when you have to get things there’s just a lot of kind of putting things off.

Kiera – Ohio:
I myself work full-time, and I’m taking classes, working another job part-time, trying to take care of my household. Sometimes it’s just not easy for me to get to class. I think if they had digital experiences it would help me keep on top of my school work, and also know that if I did miss class that I have ways to access the lecture and figure out what was going on, and be able to stay on top of work.

Divine – Massachusetts:
So we’re used to learning in the 21st century, but it is kind of boring and sometimes it can be hard for us to understand. But I think if campuses all over offered a high-quality digital experience, it could be easier, and a more cool and fun way for us to learn.
