

DIVERSITY MAKES US STRONGER

VIDEO TRANSCRIPT

Marty Rodgers, Metro DC Office Managing Director: It's one of those things where you come to the event, and you just get energized by everybody that you meet and their stories and what they're working on and what we're doing for our clients and what we're doing in the community and hearing people's personal journeys in terms of their family and friends.

Jonathan Mindrum, Chicago: I've seen a lot of leadership from our Accenture leaders and our MDs and getting together and sort of brainstorming how we can be more inclusive and welcoming to all of our employees has been really neat to see.

E.J. Moore, Washington DC Metro: I think one of the most significant aspects of the training this week is owning the work that you're responsible for—the contributions that you make to the client, as well as the project, and taking an opportunity to send the elevator back down. So, reaching back down and helping someone along the way, so they can progress through their career here.

Margarita Southwell, Denver: It's been really eye-opening. We've had an opportunity to meet new people, network, ask questions that you normally wouldn't ask, and we're getting very candid responses.

Noshaba Haq, Washington DC Metro: Being inclusive and diverse helps us grow our experiences, our expertise, learning from others. Everyone has a different background, experiences, culture, that they bring to the table.

Julie Sweet, CEO-North America: You are here because we at Accenture believe in you. If you're below MD, we believe you're going to be MD. If you're above MD, we believe you're going to get to the next level, and we want you here. We believe in you. You're incredibly gifted that is why you're here.
