It starts by understanding how four shifts are changing pensions.

There’s a shift in value as pensions agencies evolve from transaction processors to retirement coaches.

There’s a shift in volume as digital self-service changes demand for in-person services.

There’s a shift in expectation as agencies focus on delivering outcomes, not just answers, and systems of record become systems of interaction.

And there’s a shift in delivery as technical infrastructure moves from on-premise to the cloud so you can be more responsive and nimble.

The task for every pension agency is to determine how each of these shifts define their unique New.
