SUSAN LAWRENCE: I enlisted in the Army as a young private, when I was eighteen years old. I was a stenographer, and I retired as a CIO/G-6, responsible for all IT and networks in the United States Army and it was a great journey and I am just so grateful and thankful for the career that I had. And I think about the degrees I received through the Army, and what the Army has to offer is, is wonderful – especially for a young man or woman that’s kind of wandering out there not knowing what to do with their life. Join the United States Army, because it is a great equalizer. When you think about the values of the Army, when you think about loyalty duty, respect, selfless service, integrity, and personal courage. No matter what walk of life you came from, that makes us all equal in the eyes of the United States Army. And I bring that with Accenture – it’s why I joined Accenture. I am absolutely thrilled to be here, I feel like I am able to pay it back to an organization that I truly worship and love – the United States Army and its mission. I can be part of the team, be a critical member, partner, trusted partner of the United States Army as we bring great solutions to very complex problems that they’re facing today. And, Accenture’s values are very much the same as the Army values. .
